Governor's Race Highlighted By Various Issues Of Candidates

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

A call for more education spending, a major labor endorsement, another candidate's release of financial data, a soggy trip into an underground mine and a plug for gasohol were the highlights as the Kentucky governor's race headed into the weekend.

Democrat Harvey Sloane held news conferences Friday in Lexington and Louisville to announce his education platform.

Democrat Terry McBrayer appeared at a Louisville news conference to receive the endorsement of a statewide labor group.

Democrat Carroll Hubbard and his wife were in Frankfort to release their joint tax returns.

Republican Ray White toured a muddy coal mine near Hazard, and his rival, former GOP Gov. Louie Nunn, also was in Hazard to shake hands and rub elbows with prospective voters.

It was Democrat George Atkins, who campaigned in Knott, Breathitt and Rowan counties, who said he was fueling his car with gasohol.

Democrat Thelma Stovall, touring Ashland and Boyd County, took a verbal slap at Gov. Julian Carroll, who has said her nomination would be a disaster.

Democrat John Y. Brown and his camp were in an organizing flurry, announcing a number of campaign appointments.

Most of the candidates planned to converge on Pikeville to circulate among the crowds and seek the mountain vote at today's Hillbilly Days celebration.

Sloane

Sloane set forth an education platform calling for special attention to school funding, financial accountability and teachers' salaries. He said his proposals would cost $50 million more than is now committed to education, but would be the only major increases he would advocate.

The former Louisville mayor said he would "streamline" the Department of Education, remove it from the Cabinet of Education and Arts and make the superintendent of education a cabinet official.

As for education financing, he said local districts must spend more. "The state has about reached its limit. If local districts don't want to do their share, I don't think the state should bail them out," he said.

Sloane said he saw no alternative to property taxes to finance education. "I don't see, realistically, how the property tax is going to be eliminated," he said. "The property tax in Kentucky is not a great tax, proportionate to other states."

McBrayer

McBrayer was endorsed by a statewide committee claiming to represent 100 local unions. Earlier labor support — at least in public commitments — has gone largely to Mrs. Stovall, endorsed by the state AFL-CIO and the United Auto Workers. "She's the finest lady in Democratic politics, but she cannot win this fall, and I can ... You're going to live with Louie Nunn if she is nominated," he said.

Supporters passed out a leaflet indicating McBrayer had helped unions on dozens of bills when a House member. Larry Clark, business manager of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, said the "Labor for McBrayer" organization represents more than 60,000 wage earners.

He said factors in the endorsement were McBrayer's performance as a legislator, his role as state commerce commissioner in attracting industry and his activities in trying to better labor-management relations.

The United Mine Workers, a third large state union group has given its support to Atkins for governor. A fourth, the Teamsters, has made no endorsement yet.

Hubbard

Hubbard and his wife made public their 1978 joint federal and state income tax returns, reporting total income of $63,367, most of it from Hubbard's $57,500 congressional salary.

Hubbard took advantage of income averaging, reducing the federal tax owed to $10,988. The state return listed estimated income tax payments of $1,420 and $90 in additional tax due. Hubbard listed miscellaneous income totalling $8,075 from honoraria, trustees fees and other sources.

The only other candidate to release a copy of his 1978 tax returns has been McBrayer. Sloane has released copies of his 1977 federal and state returns and a current statement of his assets and liabilities.

White

White slogged his way into a Perry County underground coal mine, the latest in a series of jobs he has spent time on during the campaign, saying he wants to get close to working people. He said when he emerged from the Long Branch mine on Kentucky 15 between Hazard and Jackson that he wished he had worn gumboots. "I'm mud from head to foot," he said.

The Bowling Green lawyer talked about how mining had changed with the addition of modern equipment since he spent his boyhood in Manchester in Clay County. At that time, he said, flesh and blood ponies still were used in underground mines.

Atkins

Atkins announced that he has been using gasohol in his campaign car. The state auditor said he is promoting the alternative fuel in an effort to help farmers. Gasohol is 90 percent unleaded gasoline and 10 percent ethyl alcohol, made from corn and other grains.

"Gasohol, already widely used in the Midwest, is part of the solution to our country's energy problems," Atkins said. "... while it may cost a little more, I say why not help Kentucky farmers rather than make the Arab oil sheiks richer."

Atkins predicted that expanding use of gasohol will open up a new market for Kentucky farmers, and he said he would encourage its production and use if elected governor.

Stovall

Mrs. Stovall hit back at Carroll, who had said her nomination would be disastrous for the Democratic Party both in this year's governor's race and next year's presidential election. In remarks as she opened a Boyd County campaign headquarters at Catlettsburg, the lieutenant governor said Carroll would not have made the attack if "his candidate weren't in trouble."

Carroll backs McBrayer.

Mrs. Stovall said she was "ashamed and sorry" for the governor and added that other candidates are making no such attacks because they are "good Democrats."

She named E.B. Lowman, son of Harry King Lowman, who was Kentucky House speaker for 20 years, and Ashland real estate broker Brooks Wells as her Boyd County campaign chairmen.

Brown

At Brown headquarters in Louisville the multimillionaire businessman's round-the-clock organizing efforts led to several announcements of campaign appointments.

Frank Metts, 43, a Louisville real estate developer, for 25 years, was named state finance chairman. And Robert T. Cobb, a Louisville businessman, was named state coordinator for the campaign.

Al Barber Jr., 38, an Owensboro lawyer, and Larry Eugene Moore, 31, a barber, were named co-coordinators for Daviess County. Dr. Robert E. Robbins, 45, a surgeon in Elizabethtown, was named Hardin County coordinator. Richard Archer Prewitt, of the law firm of Prewitt & Prewitt, was named coordinator for Franklin County.

EASTER GREETINGS — This huge Easter display, built by Hank Hatcher of Murray, will be in the Murray-Calloway County Hospital cafeteria today and tomorrow to add a seasonal touch to the hospital's Easter egg hunt for the children and grandchildren of the medical staff and employees. ## Large Corporations Fail To Abide By Guidelines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifty-three of the nation's largest industrial corporations — including big providers of fuel and food — have failed to pledge formally to abide by federal anti-inflation guidelines, the government has indicated.

Among them are such well-known companies as Mobil, Standard Oil of Ohio, Kellogg and United Brands. Others include Republic and Bethlehem steel corporations, Pet, GAF and Champion Spark Plug.

Their names became known Friday in a roundabout manner through an announcement by President Carter's anti-inflation advisers.

The Council on Wage and Price Stability, which oversees the voluntary anti-inflation effort, released a list of 447 large industrial corporations that "have made an explicit commitment to comply with the price standard."

The council refused to name companies that have not pledged support, explaining through spokesman Ed Dooley that "they're not necessarily in violation of the guidelines; they just haven't made an explicit commitment."

The 53 names were determined by comparing the council's list of 447 with the corporations identified by Fortune magazine as the biggest 500 in the United States. Those were the 500 companies the council had asked for commitments to agree to hold prices in check.

None of the 53, a council statement said, "openly opposed the anti-inflation program." The council said some have problems with parts of the complex price standard. Others may be unable to respond because of bankruptcy or merger proceedings, it conjectured.

The few corporate spokesmen available for comment this Easter weekend emphasized that absence from the council's list did not necessarily mean their companies were ignoring the guidelines.

John Flint, a spokesman for Mobil, said, "There's some discussion between Mobil and the council over interpretation of some of the regulations. In the meantime, Mobil is in compliance."

And Chuck Partidge of Standard Oil of Ohio said, "I don't know why we are not on" the list of companies in compliance.

MSU Classes Of 1929 and 1954 Will Be Honored At Luncheon

Both the Golden Anniversary Class of 1929 and the Silver Anniversary Class of 1954 at Murray State University will be honored with a luncheon and a reunion on the campus on Saturday, April 28.

Recognition of members of the classes is a part of alumni activities on that date that will also include the annual alumni banquet and a President's Reception for recipients of Alumni Association scholarships for 1979-80.

Recent Drug Arrest Brings Total Number In Calloway To 19

Another arrest has been made in Calloway County on charges of illegal drug activities, bringing to 19 the number of such arrests since April 4.

Mark T. Sisk, Box 4872, Hart Hall, Murray State University, was arrested and charged with trafficking in LSD, a Class D felony. Bond was set at $20,000, and he is presently out of the Calloway County Jail on bond.

Of the 19 local arrests, 11 have been students at Murray State. More than 70 warrants were issued last week, and several more arrests are expected in the future.

The arrests are the result of a four-month-long undercover investigation in Calloway, McCracken, Marshall and Lyon counties by the Kentucky State Police, the Murray City Police, the Marshall County sheriff's department and the Paducah police narcotics division.

The luncheon is scheduled to begin at 11:30 a.m. in Winslow Cafeteria, with the reunions to follow from 2 to 4 p.m. Both the luncheon and the reunion are open to anyone who would like to participate in honoring members of the two classes.

Mike Peek of Nashville, formerly of Benton, a 1970 Murray State graduate who is now president-elect of the Alumni Association, will preside during the luncheon program. He will be installed as the new president at the conclusion of the banquet program that evening.

A highlight of the luncheon will be the presentation of Emeritus Club membership certificates to 50-year graduates by District Judge Sid Easley of Murray, a 1962 graduate who is the current president of the association. The 1929 graduating class was the fourth in the school's history.

The luncheon program will also include a welcome by Dr. Constantine W. Curris, university president, and reflections and observations by Clyde T. Lassiter of Lexington, a member of the 1929 class.

Bill Morgan of Benton, vice-president of the Alumni Association, will give the invocation, and Rev. Hoyt W. Owen of Paducah, retired First United Methodist Church minister, will deliver the benediction. Kay Bates, a member of the music faculty, will present a vocal solo, accompanied by James Wright.

Ron Greene, Racer head basketball coach, will be the speaker at the banquet, which will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Center. The President's Reception is also scheduled in the Student Center from 4 to 6 p.m.

Reunion luncheon and $5.50 each for the banquet. They should be made no later than April 20.

Anyone wishing to make a reservation for the luncheon or banquet may do so by calling or by sending name and address and a check for the proper amount made payable to Murray State University Alumni Association before the reservation deadline to:

Adultery: Eight-Letter Word That Means Sordid

DEAR ABBY: Is adultery always wrong? I have a married friend I'll call Jim who has a girlfriend I'll call Joyce. When Jim and Joyce are together it is obvious that they are madly in love.

Jim was trapped into marriage by a girl who got herself pregnant so Jim would have to marry her.

A few years ago, when Jim fell in love with Joyce, he was all set to leave his wife and marry Joyce, but his wife deliberately got herself pregnant, and Jim was trapped again.

The only reason Jim is staying with his wife is because of his two children. Joyce understands the situation and accepts it, so she doesn't pressure Jim for a divorce.

Jim's wife knows nothing about Joyce, so she's not getting hurt by his affair.

So what's wrong with Jim grabbing whatever happiness he can? Isn't this affair better than breaking up a family?

A FRIEND OF BOTH

DEAR FRIEND: Even if Jim and Joyce were never caught in this adulterous affair it would still be wrong. When a man really loves a woman he wants her by his side publicly instead of sneaking around back alleys. Divorce is legal, respectable and dignified. Adultery is cheap, shoddy and deceitful.

And as for Jim's wife "deliberately getting herself pregnant" ... that's not possible. She had to have Jim's deliberate cooperation.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 16-year-old girl who was grounded for three weeks. I couldn't even have my friends over. I was very, very angry, but my parents really did me a favor, and I'd like to tell other kids about it, and maybe it will help them.

The first week I was really mad. I wouldn't speak to my parents. The nicer they were to me, the nastier I was — slamming doors, turning the radio way up just to bug them, etc.

Then I had a talk with my favorite teacher. She advised me to use the time constructively, so I cleaned my room from top to bottom — rearranged all my clothes and sorted them out. I gave the stuff I'd outgrown to the Goodwill, sewed on buttons that had been off a long time, etc.

I got way ahead in my history, science and English. I also read two good books and caught up on letter writing I'd put off for a long time.

I was still mad at my parents when I was around them, but inside I felt a lot better about myself.

Hope you think it's worth passing along.

UNGROUNDING AT LAST

DEAR UNGROUNDING: You bet it's worth passing along. You didn't say why you were grounded, but I'll bet you'll never do it again.

DEAR ABBY: I cheated a little on my income tax and haven't been able to sleep very well lately. Any suggestions?

TOSSING AND TURNING

DEAR T and T: Yes. Send the IRS $500. And if you still can't sleep, send them the balance.

Congress Unreigned

Most Americans are suffering from the scramble to keep up with the cost of living — and of paying taxes.

But none of us enjoys the same ability to provide self-relief as do members of Congress.

The Senate came under a bit of criticism recently when it scrapped the ceiling of $8,600 on outside income, voting to delay the restriction for four years. Now a subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee is working on a bill to allow each representative and senator a $50-per-day tax deduction for each day Congress is in session.

Members already are allowed a $3,000 deduction in consideration of their need to maintain a home in Washington as well as in their districts. But the proposed deduction, which could amount to as much as $14,000 annually, is designed to further offset the cost of living in Washington.

It could mean an average reduction in individual tax bills of about $4,600.

The American public is unlikely to view the scheme with sympathy. Approval by Congress two years ago of a $12,000-a-year pay raise for members drew cries of outrage and led to adoption in each House of the outside pay limitations.

Following as it does the Senate's reconsideration of the outside pay ruling, the tax dodge is certain to draw fire.

The lawmakers, we trust, will take another look at their self-serving handiwork.

More Accomplished In Five-Day Period

NEW YORK (AP) — In a period of just five days in Manila, says William McCrea, the executive of a small business "can accomplish more than he could in two years running around the world."

During those few days in the Philippines, from June 24 to June 29, hundreds of entrepreneurs, bankers, advisers from large corporations, government officials and others will gather for Project ICONE.

The acronym stands for the International Congress on New Enterprise. Out of it, says McCrea, the congress chairman, small businesses from both emerging and developed nations might find profitable alliances in each other's countries.

Businesses in emerging nations can benefit from the know-how of foreign companies. That's understood. But McCrea explains that small concerns in developed nations also need contacts in emerging nations.

ICONE, supported by the Philippines, the U.S. Commerce Department, the U.S. Agency for International Development, Control Data Corp., the World Bank and others, will assemble those who can break such barriers as inability to identify and evaluate opportunities, costs concerns and worries about the mechanics of foreign trade. McCrea, whose idea it is, promises "it will be a concentrated, practical program for those looking for ventures with a partner in other countries."

The Seydel Companies of Atlanta will be there, both as student and teacher. Headed by Scott Seydel, the company already is involved in about 20 joint ventures with local partners in developing countries.

Seydel is concerned mainly with textiles and textile chemicals, but it is also interested in industrial machinery and agribusiness.

Roach Inc., Columbus, Ohio, has signed up. Its international experience is in direct sales of apparel through distributors in many parts of the world. Again, both teacher and student.

The same role will be played by The Private Development Corp. of The Philippines, which has been active in more than 50 companies. And the Ashamu Group, a Nigerian, native-owned conglomerate.

About 35 percent of the participants are likely to be the senior executives or presidents of small or medium scale companies from developed countries, with another 35 percent from emerging nations.

About 10 percent, perhaps 40 or 50 representatives, are likely to be from

Mini-University

For the past few weeks I have been teaching a class for Mini-University on early living in Kentucky. The kids in the class are all around ten years old, and we have had an interesting time learning about how people lived and worked 150 years ago.

The first thing we tried to do was to visualize the trip from the east — Virginia or North Carolina, since that is where most of their ancestors came from — across the mountains to Kentucky. It proved difficult for these modern day children to imagine themselves in a world without automobiles and McDonald's, but they divided into groups, picked a group leader and began making lists of what would be really important to bring with them to the new country. I had tried to stress that since they would be traveling (on their imaginary trip) by wagons or flatboats, only the essential items should be brought along. They strained their imaginations to grasp what could be made or grown after reaching their new homes.

This led to a discussion of what skills these pioneers should have. They finally decided that a carpenter, blacksmith, weaver, and a farmer would be absolutely necessary. It was really interesting to hear these kids discuss just what could be made from the raw products available in the new land, and what skills would be necessary to make these things.

The end of the first session was devoted to designing log cabins for their new homes in the wilderness. At first, these cabins were drawn complete with basements, upper stories, and bathrooms. Then we got practical and realized that the early shelters would be very basic, and wouldn't contain much more than a room or two with a fireplace for cooking and warmth. Some of the children even planned what their gardens would look like.

A few of the girls refused to admit that they would have had to go out into the dark, cold night; they conceded that bathrooms were a little too revolutionary for those times, but they put their outhouses right onto the cabins, so that they wouldn't have to make a long trip. Who knows, maybe some of the pioneer women had the same kinds of minds and did the same?

Our second session was given by two very nice girls from TVA who brought an interesting collection of old-time tools with them. The kids did their best to figure out what these tools were used for; sometimes they guessed right, but many of those objects were so foreign to modern life that it was impossible to guess. It was a real lesson in tools that can't be plugged into an electrical socket or run on batteries. Many of them were hand-made.

Our next session will be a trip to the Home Place at LBL, where we will all get a chance to actually see what it was like to live on a primitive farm. We will also get to see many of these tools in use. And the last session will be an old-time school day, which will be held at the city park near the old courthouse. The kids will then find out a little about what a one-room school is like, complete with McGuffey Readers.

My group of fifth-graders were: Joey and Woody Hicks, Julie Edwards, Anne-Marie Hoke, Annamaria Clevenger, Connie Moore, Billie Weirido, Libby Welch, Kim Bynum, Penny Futrell, and James Daniels. They hopefully have been able to take a little interest in Kentucky history by trying to live it for a few hours. And they have certainly made me realize that the contrast between life then and now is so great that modern children have trouble even imagining what it was like.

Severest Penalties For Deer Poaching

Frankfort, Ky. — Warren District Judge Henry J. Potter today levied what Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources officials are calling the severest penalties for deer poaching in state history.

Meted the maximum fine of $5,000 each were Larry Wholbrey (Route 5) and Harvey Bryson (1636 Curd St.), both of Bowling Green, and Lonnie McMillan of Maryville, Tennessee. In addition to the fines, each man was ordered to pay $333.33 in replacement costs for the five deer found in their possession and court costs of $27.50.

Judge Potter also sentenced each man to a total of 450 days in jail, but probated the sentence provided the men sacrifice their hunting rights for the next five years and pay the entire fine.

"It is encouraging to see deer poaching, which is a serious problem in Kentucky, being taken seriously by the state judiciary," remarked Director R. W. Garrison of the department's Division of Law Enforcement. Garrison added that this is one of several cases where maximum poaching fines have been levied since the fine was raised to $1,000 for each offense.

The three men were arrested on December 9, 1978, by Warren Co. Conservation Officer James Taylor and Second Wildlife District Supervisor Wayne Riley shortly after 10 p.m. The officers found five dead deer, a spotlight, three knives and some ammunition in the suspects' possession. The men pled guilty to charges of illegal possession of deer.

Commissioner Carl E. Kays of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources reacted with praise for "the state judiciary." "Law enforcement and the prevention of poaching, vital parts of wildlife management, are possible only with cooperation from the public and the judiciary in branding poachers for the outlaws that they are."

SCHOOLING FISH

The most commonly known aspect of social behavior in fish is their tendency to "school," to group together in large numbers.

Sport fishermen in the Spring look for schools of popular gamefish such as white bass, crappie and black bass, and take advantage of the abundance of fish in one place.

Not all fish school. Certain species such as largemouth bass, white bass and many saltwater fish travel in schools when young, but break up into smaller units and finally become solitary fish as they grow older and larger.

Interestingly, those fish which school for their entire lives are usually forage fish such as minnows and herring.

Safety in numbers may be their motto, suggests the staff at Mercury outboards' fishing department, but it's also possible that schools of small fish are nature's way of providing a quick meal for hungry predator fish such as bass, pike and muskie.

Research has shown that schooling fish do maintain a definite awareness of each other. This is evident in the way they keep a set distance apart and in their synchronized movements.

Most fishermen have seen this in the actions of minnows in a lake or stream. Disturb the water near them and they turn in unison and flee, never bumping into each other in their hurry to evade the danger.

No one fish is really a leader of a school.

What triggers the group to act in unison remains a mystery that biologists have yet to solve.

The Duck Call

By Charlie McKenney
Ducks Unlimited Secretary

I hope you harvested your fair share of ducks this past season. Even if you didn't have a great season, I bet you had some great times and have a new duck hunting story to tell.

Duck hunting is probably not on your mind now unless you still have a duck blind floating around on one of the lakes.

I have heard some strange stories about blinds just picking up anchor and moving to another spot on the lake without telling their owner. I also heard a story about a trailer loaded with a duck blind that took a trip into Trigg County leaving the blind setting on the bank of Lake Barkley.

Well, enough of this small talk. Now to the reason for the Duck Call in the middle of April.

It is time to elect officers for the Calloway County Chapter of Ducks Unlimited for next year. These people will direct the chapter and have responsibility for putting on the annual D. U. Banquet. The local chapter has over 200 members and once again had an outstanding banquet raising over $2,000 for the National Chapter to use for purchasing wet lands in Canada.

I have heard several members mention that they would be willing to take an active part, and even hold an office in the local chapter. O. K. here's your chance.

A meeting will be held April 16th, that's Monday night at 7:00 p.m. at the Triangle Inn. Officers for the coming year must be elected.

The banquet depends upon the active support of the local chapter and its members, which in turn supports the supplies the D. U. Shotgun and many other auction items.

So make sure that the local chapter survives and continues to grow; attend the meeting and take an active part — do your fair share.

See you Monday night at the Triangle Inn. Bring a friend.

FOUR WHEELING

By Hamp Brooks Jr.

What Kind Of Gas Mileage Are You Really Getting

My four wheel drive is getting horrible gas mileage. What can I do about it? Many is the time we have heard fellow four-wheelers speak those very words, and it seems probable that with the rising cost of gasoline they'll be repeated even more frequently in the future.

Let's be realistic. Just what kind of mileage are you really getting? If you're not sure check it out carefully. Don't use your speedometer, for the calculation because most rigs have big tires and the speedo's are notorious for error in such cases. Top of the tank; drive a known distance of miles and return; and then refill the tank.

Our experience with four wheel drives includes a range of three miles per gallon all the way up to thirty. We'll be surprised if you're not somewhere in between. Four wheel drives have not always been notorious gas hogs. Most of this has occurred in recent years to be truthful. Why?

Primarily four things in our opinion. They got bigger and heavier; which required larger engines as engines grew far less efficient; and to meet government requirements the factories started raising the axle ratios, based on the use of narrow squatty tires; and you and I got too lazy to shift gears for ourselves.

Today's four wheel drive truck and its enclosed cousins (Blazer, Ramcharger, Bronco) is from five hundred to twelve hundred pounds heavier than its ancestors. That's bad enough but in addition it is also bulkier, having to displace one and a half times as much air just to move along. Those figures alone can cut gas mileage in half. You don't take something with the aerodynamics of a brick wall and stretch gas mileage. Featherfooting an anvil filled with mercury and sealed with lead doesn't accomplish much either.

The early jeeps used a sixty to seventy horsepower four cylinder displacing one hundred and thirty four cubic inches. Now they use a one hundred and thirty horsepower motor displacing three hundred and four cubic inches with eight cylinders. In the case of the trucks we used to get the job done with a six cylinder engine churning out about one hundred and fifty horses. That's more than most V-8's produce today. Instead of two hundred and fifty cubic inches we're feeding four hundred or more to do the same job. Cubic inches eat gasoline. And in order to save the atmosphere we've had to detune the engine's efficiency wise, which meant it took lots of cubic inches just to get the job done.

This brought about the axle ratios of 3.08 to 1 and similar figures. But in a big motor and let it loaf was the policy. That would be fine if all four-wheelers retained the stock tires and drove a steady fifty-five miles per hour on level roads. This does not occur. Most four wheel drives get big tires added thereby further raising the axle ratio. In effect the rig thinks it's climbing a steep hill just going down the road.

I rode in a Blazer last month which will illustrate our point. It was geared far too high to begin with, had hewmongs big tires added also, and should the power have been sufficient for the engine to wind out to five thousand rpm in high gear we would have been traveling 147 miles per hour. The oldtimers had gears on the order of 4.56 to 1. Put on your big tires and gas mileage got better instead of worse. Back to the Blazer a moment. Considering the gears it was pulling and the swath of atmosphere it had to displace it would require about eight hundred horsepower to reach that speed.

Another real culprit is the automatic transmission, especially when combined with fulltime four wheel drive. A fellow four-wheeler over in Graves County bought one in 1976. He drove it a little over a year, and it got just about seven miles per gallon on the average. He yanked out the automatic transmission and replaced it with a straight

Fishing Line

Have you heard about the fishing contest sponsored by Donnie Peal? Donnie is the manager of the Hickory Hut BBQ place on Chestnut Street and he is having a contest for the largest crappie and-or bass caught on sport fishing tackle during the months of April and May.

Bring your fish by the Hickory Hut and have them weighed and recorded, probably even photographed too, then at the end of each month, the person with the largest crappie and the person muddy and the bass are hitting short, but that makes it more of a challenge.

If you are going to bass fish try all colors of spinner baits until one produces. White has been pretty good most of the time but don't overlook the lime or yellow. Plastic worms are producing some bass every day so we know the water temperature is rising. I don't think color makes a lot of difference in this dingy or muddy water if the bass are feeding.

Try to find brush or small clumps of bushes just under the surface and drop a worm right in the middle of it.

If you have a rod with bad line on it don't try this because you will just lose the fish, along with the hook and worm.

Twenty pound mono should be heavy enough most of the time. After each fish or hang, be sure and check your line for nicks and scrapes caused by the brush. It is much easier to retie than think about the big one that got away.

You crappie fishermen may have a little trouble finding fish on your favorite ledge or dropoff since the water is so high. You may have to look for them to be suspended at a shallower depth.

A few crappie are being taken from sunken treetops along the shorelines by the people who put them out and know how to find them. The water temperature is in the high fifties and rising steadily so this will help to bring the fish in from deep water to the brush. Don't give up, we haven't really lost anything until it gets started then stops.

Now then, we have plenty of cover to fish on Barkley and Kentucky lakes so get to it. I know the water is high and

To Fish Or Not

To Fish: That Was Never The Question

The things a fisherman will do...

Phil Sumner and I had been talking up a bass fishing trip on Kentucky Lake for almost a month. But something always seemed to get in the way. His brother-in-law got sick. The lake was high and muddy. I had a "request" on the home front to fix that leak in the pantry. It seemed like we never would get to go fishing.

But the recent weekend loomed with no major stumbling blocks. I got on the phone and got in touch with Phil. "Boy, you got any line on your reel?" I asked.

"Well, I don't know. What's on your mind?" he asked, jumping to learn the when and where, but not violating the "code of the cool."

"Thought we might see if we can find an old bass around one of Kentucky Lake's stumps," I returned. "I hear they're biting, and tomorrow's as good a time as any to find out."

We wasted no time laying our plans to rendezvous, and after hanging up I changed line in a reel, picked out a few likely looking lures and then went to bed to dream of bass-s-s-s-zzz...

The storm woke me up. It was quite a blow, and through the window I could see lightning flashes and silhouettes of bending trees. I looked at the clock. 3:10 a.m. Plenty of time for the storm to move on, and I drifted back for another couple of hours before the clock came alive.

But at 5 a.m. the back edge of the front was still around. The electricity was gone, but the rain was coming as if poured from a barrel.

I got up, dressed, donned rubber boots and rain suit and headed out into the downpour. I never had a thought about checking with Phil to call the outing off. He wanted to go fishing as badly as I did, and I knew he'd be at the dock on time.

A short stack of pancakes and a couple of cups of coffee at a local restaurant bolstered my spirits. The rain slackened and the dawn skies were lighter than I'd anticipated. The wind was down, and the dreams of the previous night now turned to daydreams as I drove on to the marina.

"What do you say, Wild Man?" I asked Phil, who was waiting dockside. He had on a heavy parka pulled down over chest waders. "Think it'll rain?"

Phil glanced skyward at the clouds and announced, "We'd better get on the water. It's crazy to go fishing in the middle of a storm, but if you're already out there when the storm hits, that's another thing."

His logic seemed sound enough, and we made final plans. The west side of the lake, where we were muddy from the sudden influx of rainwater. We wanted to fish something not quite so brown, and the east side of the lake normally doesn't carry as much color as fast. We agreed to trailer the boat across Egner's Ferry Bridge at Aurora and launch from the old airstrip in Land Between the Lakes.

It took a quarter hour to drive the distance and another ten minutes to get the boat off the trailer and the car parked. By this time the wind was regaining some strength.

We motored out of the launching area parallel to the riprap along the highway. We intended to turn north under the bridge and fish toward the Higgins, Sugar, Duncan Bay sector of the lake.

"Let's give these rocks a quick try," I suggested, cutting back on the outboard. I'd caught fish off the bridge riprap before, and I was anxious to get a plug in the water.

Storm clouds didn't keep Kentucky Lake's bass from biting. Phil Sumner keeps tension on a fish near the riprap along Egner's Ferry Bridge at Aurora.

I've got a thing about crayfish pattern baits in early spring, and I'd tied on an orange-bellied Rebel Deep Wee-R. Philip and I started lashing the water just off the rocks, and on the third cast I felt a sudden surge of pressure and then a tell-tale jerking on the end of my line.

"Son! Get the net!" I could tell the fish was bigger than the "bank runner" category, and I didn't want to take a chance on letting him flop off near the boat.

The bass made a quick run, and then surfaced, shaking violently to throw the lure. It was a Kentucky bass, better than two pounds, and I kept my line tight while he played down. Then Philip made a scoop and the first bass of the year was in the boat.

"Nothing to it," I grinned and smugly went about the business of trying to match the effort.

We fished around to the other side of the riprap, and this time it was Philip's turn to connect. His fish was smaller, but, fiesty, a chunky 12 inch Kentucky which was deposited in the cooler.

That's when we did something dumb. We agreed to head up the lake to try some main lake treetops looking for Mama Hogjaws.

Four hours later, four long, strike-less hours, we were discussing the error of our ways. To start with, we left a good concentration of fish along the riprap. To make matters worse, we'd run up the lake, far from the car, in the face of a new buildup of clouds and wind. And we'd paid the price. We'd sat out in some of the heaviest rains either of us could remember, stoically throwing plugs, cranking back in, pulling at backlashes when we tried to east into the wind. For the first hour I was relatively dry, but my new rainsuit started giving away to moisture in the seat. Philip and I commented how much fun we were having.

"Well if I'm going to be wet, I sure plan on catching more than two fish," I said. We wrenched in our baits, started the motor and ran back uplake to the bridge. Philip turned his back to the rain, and I pulled my cap brim as low as I could, opened my mouth and took stinging raindrops in the face for the next three miles.

But our efforts paid off. Shortly after getting back to the rocks I tied into another Kentucky bass of around 14 inches. Another hour's fishing produced two more, with the last closer to three pounds than two.

There were a few headaches along with the happiness, however. The spot we were fishing has been popular with catfishermen for years, and miles of old broken off line lurks up from the rocks to snag passing lures. We were hung regularly and lost a half dozen crank-baits in the process.

"Let's run over to Kenlake Marina and pick up some more baits," I suggested.

"Boy, that sounds good," Philip responded. "I could sure use a burger."

Two burgers, two cups of coffee and four lures later we were back under the bridge casting for more Kentuckies. We fished around a quarter hour without a strike when an ominous sound spewed out an ugly lightning bolt.

"You know, the couch and afghan sound mighty good to me. What do you think?" I asked Philip.

"I'll be there before you will," Philip said, and we headed for the ramp.

So that's the spring fishing addicts' life cycle. It goes from dreaming about bass to catching them then back to daydreaming about them. It's hard to decide which is more fun.

Deadline For Boat Registration

Frances Shea, Circuit Court Clerk for Calloway County, has announced that boat registrations for 1979 expire on April 30, 1979, and registrations for 1980 are being sold at this time.

Mrs. Shea said that persons desiring to reregister their boats should bring with them the 1979 registration form. The cost for these licenses depends on the length of the boat, the clerk said.

For boats which have never been registered in Kentucky before, the owner must bring two copies of the bill of sale or proof of ownership to obtain a license, Mrs. Shea added.

Kentucky Afield

By John Wilson

When's the best time to go fishing?

"Right now," says Charlie Bowers, director of the Kentucky fish and wildlife department's fisheries division.

According to Bowers, the period from the first of April through the middle of May is the best time of the year to catch fish in Kentucky. Most game species spawn during this period, and spawning activity causes fish to concentrate in shallow water areas where they are easy to locate and catch.

"We've already had better fishing this year than we had by the end of April last spring," Bowers says. "This looks like it could be a banner year for spring fishing. We have good population levels of game fish and they seem more active than usual, perhaps because their strength hasn't been sapped by extremely cold weather."

There have been more excellent walleye catches from the South Fork of the Cumberland River and white bass runs are just about to reach their peak. Bowers feels. Crappie are beginning to show up more and more on angler's strings as the water continues to warm and good catches of bass have been reported from several lakes already this year.

The only dark spot on this otherwise bright angling horizon is the weather. Spring in Kentucky is almost always marked by unsettled weather conditions — thunderstorms, cold snaps, strong winds, and other disturbances that make fishing less than ideal.

But, Bowers says, fish are more adaptable than fishermen and will spawn under less than ideal conditions. Those anglers, who wait for that perfect day might miss the peak spawning periods. So get out on the water whenever you can, even if it is a little cooler, cloudier or windier than you'd like.

Of course, this doesn't mean that you should keep fishing during really severe weather. Our large lakes can get rough in a hurry when the wind gets up and it's extremely dangerous to be caught out in an open boat during a thunderstorm. So temper your desire to catch fish with a good dose of common sense and keep a watchful eye on the weather.

But do go fishing — the way things look now, this spring is one you certainly don't want to miss.

Craig Stadler Shoots 67, Takes Over Masters Lead

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Craig Stadler decided he loved the weather.

But, he had to think about it a while.

"Do I think I'm a good mudder?" he said, repeating a question. "I guess so after today."

Stadler, a pudgy 210-pounder, completed a 6-under-par 66 after a vicious thunderstorm forced a two-hour suspension of play Friday, and surged into a share of the second-round lead with Ed

Sneed at 135 in the 43rd Masters golf tournament.

"It rained last year in the third round of the PGA and I shot 67," Stadler said. "I guess I hope it rains the next two days."

Sneed, winless since the 1977 Tallahassee Open, completed his round of 67 before the heavy rain struck and anxiously waited to see if his 5-under round would be washed out.

It wasn't, but the round wasn't completed either.

Twelve players remained on the course when darkness delayed the conclusion of the round, which the Masters Committee said would resume at 8:30 a.m. today. The third round was to begin as originally scheduled — at 11:30 a.m.

"I certainly don't want it washed out, but I can't dwell on it," Sneed said as play was halted when the storied 7,040-yard, par-72 Augusta National Golf Club was included in a tornado warning area.

Sneed and Stadler built a 3-shot advantage over Leonard Thompson and Ray Floyd, who finished late in the day at 138 on the rain-soaked course. Thompson had a 70 and Floyd, the baseball fanatic who won last week's Greater Greensboro Open, shot 68.

First-round leader Bruce Lietzke blew to a 75 with a fat 40 on the back side after the storm and was well back in the pack at even par 142.

Tom Watson, golf's Player of the Year the past two seasons and the pretournament favorite, and Joe Inman were tied for fifth place after each fired a 71 for 139.

Jack Nicklaus, only five-time winner of this prestigious event, lurked in striking distance after a poor start — collecting four birdies on the back side for a 71-140 and a tie with Lindy Miller, 67, Lou Graham, 71, and Spanish ace Seve Ballesteros, 68.

Miller Barber, one of the dozen players having to finish his round today, also stood at 4-under-par with three holes to play — needing one more birdie to equal the course record of 64.

Lanny Wadkins, the only two-time winner on this year's tour, recovered from a bad first round with a 69 for 142, a total matched by Hale Irwin after a 70.

Defending champion Gary Player had a 72-145, Lee Trevino 71-144, Arnold Palmer 72-146 and Billy Casper, among the first day leaders, a 75-144.

The Kenlake Indoor Tennis Complex (above) should be open for play by June 1, says the club's professional Del Purcell. The four-court complex was originally scheduled for completion last fall, but a change in ownership of the construction company delayed the progress. Both memberships and hourly rates will be sold.

'Giant Step' Racers Ink 3rd Recruit In 6-10 Michael Bates

Murray State basketball Coach Ron Greene termed it a "giant step in the right direction," as the Racers signed 6-10 Michael Bates to a binding national letter of intent Friday.

MICHAEL BATES

The 221-pound Bates was one of the southwest's most heralded junior college players at Eastern Oklahoma Junior College in Wilburton, Okla.

"We are putting together a team that will be very competitive in the Ohio Valley Conference," Greene said after the acquisition of Bates, who averaged 18.8 points and 11 rebounds last season to finish with a two-year total of 1,009 points.

As a 6-6, 175-pound forward, Bates was a member of the 1975-76 Class AA state champions at Memphis Treadwell High School. Also on that squad were Robby Randolph and Hank McDowell.

During his two years at Eastern Oklahoma, Bates grew four inches and gained 40 pounds. "We knew when we recruited Mike that he'd be a big man by the time he graduated," said Eastern Coach Jerry Smith.

As a freshman, Bates averaged 20.4 points a game and earned All-Oklahoma Junior College honors. He was also named honorable mention JUCO All-American and all-region in 1977-78.

Bates is the third Murray State signee, joining Eminence High's Mont Sleet, a 32-point scorer last season, and Henderson County's Mont Sleet, who averaged 21 points and 15 rebounds as a senior last season.

The Racers will also have available three transfers who were redshirted last season — 6-4 Torell Harris, who came from Duquesne, 6-3 Michael Davis of Schoolcraft (Minn.) Junior College, and guard Gary Hooker, who transferred from Mississippi State when Greene departed.

Purcell To Play Nastase In May

Mel Purcell intends to turn pro within a few years, but he will get a chance to play against the pros much sooner than that.

Purcell, one of the top-ranked 21-and-under tennis players in the U.S. and a redshirt freshman at the University of Tennessee, has been invited to play in an exhibition event in Virginia Beach, Va., May 10-13.

He will face Rumanian Ilie Nastase on the first or second day of play. The draw will consist of five professionals and two other amateurs — Ben Testerman and Scott Davis.

Pudgy Stadler Breaks Monotony Of Golf Tour

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

AUGUSTA, Ga. — There are the pro tour's young lions — all lean, blond and so stylized you can't tell them apart without tossing them out on the golf course and seeing what grip they use.

Then there is Craig Stadler, co-leader at the halfway point today in the 43rd Masters.

Young Stadler looks like the plumper half of the movies' old Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy comedy team. If Jackie Gleason ever got sick, he could step in to fill the Ralph Cranston role.

"Are you a big eater?" the pillow 25-year-old pro was asked after he shot a 66 Friday to tie Ed Sneed at 135 after 36 holes of Augusta National's fairway festival.

"Naw," he replied, "it just stays with me quite well."

This was not a sufficient answer for the probing press.

"What are your dimensions — how much do you weigh?" a newsman persisted.

Stadler paused momentarily and then countered, "Wanna take a guess?"

Laughter.

Stadler not only looks like an embryo Jackie Gleason — he is twice as funny.

Asked what his greatest thrill had been in previous Masters, he responded, "Gallering on Saturday — I never made the cut."

Winner of the U.S. Amateur Championship in 1973, he was paired with golf's all-time champion, Jack Nicklaus, in his Masters inaugural in 1974.

Someone asked him if there were any humorous incidents in the experience.

"It probably humored Nicklaus," he said. "All I know is I hit second on every hole."

After the round, Nicklaus said, "Nice round, Craig."

"Thanks," Stadler responded. "The name is Craig."

His name had been misspelled on the scoreboard.

"I noticed they had it wrong this year, too," Stadler said.

The name is Craig Stadler, not Craig, as in Nettles. Golf buffs better remember it. He may be around for a spell.

The tour book lists him at 5-foot-10 and 210 pounds, which gives him the benefit of some doubt. He has a round, friendly face with reddish mustache. He has a puckish smile.

"You can say what you want about my weight as long as you keep it under 200 pounds," he told reporters.

His suit size is 46-fat.

If he wins the Masters, he's not apt to grab Johnny Miller's Sears Roebuck clothing contract. But the brewery companies may scramble for his commercial services.

His favorite interests, he says, are golf and beer, not necessarily in that order.

Racer Tennis Team Takes 13th Victory

The Murray State men's tennis team dumped Louisville 6-3 yesterday to race to its 13th victory in 16 matches this spring.

Terje Persson fell to Louisville's Mark Alvarez 7-6, 6-2 at No. 1 singles; Chris Leonard beat John O'Brien 6-3, 6-4 at No. 2; Roger Berthiaume defeated Scott Pacher 6-1, 7-5 at No. 3; Finn Swarting whipped Wayne Putlak 6-4, 6-2 at No. 4; Mike Costigan edged Ken Putlak 6-1, 3-6, 6-3 at No. 5, and Steve Willie lost to Akin Anastopoulos 6-4, 6-4 at No. 6.

Persson-Leonard stopped Alvarez-Wayne Putlak 3-6, 6-4, 6-2 at No. 1 doubles, and Willie-Berthiaume beat Pacher-Anastopoulos 7-6, 4-6, 6-2 at No. 3. Swarting and Costigan lost to O'Brien and Ken Putlak 6-2, 6-4 at No. 2.

The Racers played Western Kentucky in Bowling Green today.

Nets, Cavaliers Fall From Title Race

By the Associated Press

Atlanta's defense and Philadelphia's muscle brought an abrupt end to the two miniseries in the National Basketball Association's Eastern Conference, while the home-court advantage helped stretch things to the limit in the West.

The Atlanta Hawks limited Cleveland to just 13 points in the final period and beat the Cavaliers 100-91 Friday night, while centers Caldwell Jones and Darryl Dawkins combined for 37 rebounds as the Philadelphia 76ers overpowered the New Jersey Nets 111-101.

Atlanta and Philadelphia

thus completed two-game sweeps of their first-round series and will begin play in the best-of-seven second-round Sunday, with Atlanta at Washington and Philadelphia at San Antonio.

In the West, the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Denver Nuggets 121-109 and the Portland Trail Blazers defeated the Phoenix Suns 96-92 to tie those series at one victory apiece. The deciding games will be played Sunday in Denver and Phoenix.

Atlanta and Houston were tied 78-78 after three periods, but the Rockets were held scoreless for 5:33 of the fourth quarter and managed just 5 points in the opening 9:25 of the period as the Hawks pulled away.

"The key to our team is good team defense," said Terry Furlow, Atlanta's reserve guard. "The Atlanta Hawks' D, that's what it all came down to."

Moses Malone led Houston with 21 points and 24 rebounds but only scored 8 points in the second half.

"As John Paul Jones or someone once said, 'We found the enemy and they're really us,'" said Houston Coach Tom Nissalke, who said the Rockets did not get the ball inside enough to the 6-foot-10 Malone.

"Their defense took us out of what we wanted to do," said Houston guard Calvin Murphy. "They had a game plan and they stuck with it."

Offensively, John Drew and Eddie Johnson scored 25 points each and Furlow scored

NBA Playoffs

12 of his 14 points the second half as Atlanta posted its 17th consecutive victory at home.

The 76ers simply out-muscled the Nets, pulling down an amazing 80 rebounds as Coach Billy Cunningham used his two centers together for much of the game. Jones had 24 points and 21 rebounds while Dawkins had 19 points and 16 rebounds.

The 6-11 Dawkins said he liked being on the court at the same time as the 7-1 Jones. "If my guy gets by me I know Caldwell will be there," he said. "I can relax a little if I know he's in there."

The Sixers led 51-45 at the half, went up by 10 after three periods and kept the lead in double figures throughout the final quarter.

Bernard King led New Jersey with 27 points while John Williamson, who scored 38 points in Wednesday's game, was held to 21 this time on 9-for-34 shooting.

Los Angeles and Portland had two of the best home-court records in the NBA during the regular season, the Lakers compiling a 31-10 mark and the Blazers going 33-8. Both used the home-court advantage to stay alive in the first-round series Friday night.

Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, saddled with five personal fouls for nearly the entire second half, scored 32 points and grabbed 12 rebounds against Denver.

How did he keep from fouling out?

"Don't ask me," replied Abdul-Jabbar. "I just played as hard as I could and left it up to providence."

The Lakers, who led most of the way, finally put the game away by outscoring the Nuggets 11-4 in a two-minute stretch late in the final period.

Jamaal Wilkes added 26 points and 13 rebounds for Los Angeles, Norm Nixon handed out 16 assists and Adrian Dantley came off the bench to score 25 points. David Thompson paced the Nuggets with 29 points but was held scoreless in the fourth quarter until the outcome was decided.

Rookies Ron Brewer and Mychal Thompson scored 21 and 20 points, respectively.

Milner, Stargell's Sub, Leads Pirates

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
When Willie Stargell is injured, the Pittsburgh Pirates aren't necessarily hurting.

There's always John Milner in reserve. "The man can play," says Dave Parker.

The Pirate supersub showed some of his stuff Friday night for the second game in a row. Playing again in place of the injured Stargell, Milner blasted two, two-run homers to key a 7-6 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I just want to be an asset to the club," said Milner, obviously not unhappy as a two-run homer capped a five-run Pirate burst in the third inning off Pete Vuckovich and staked Pittsburgh to a 5-2 lead.

Garber made it stand up as Atlanta edged Los Angeles. Garber relieved rookie Rick Matula, who emerged with his first major league victory. The Braves smashed 11 hits off three Los Angeles pitchers, eight of them against loser Doug Rau.

Weaver Gives, Receives Thumb; Orioles Dropped

By the Associated Press
By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
He gave his own catcher the thumb, then got thumbed by the ump. It was just another game for Earl Weaver.

Baltimore's fiery manager didn't appreciate Rick Dempsey getting picked off base in the second inning and got into a brief helmet-slammng contest with him when he yanked the catcher three innings later.

Weaver didn't appreciate Ken Singleton getting thrown out of the game for protesting his strikeout in the fifth inning — and he followed Singleton to the showers for protesting the ejection.

And he certainly didn't appreciate the balk call against Baltimore pitcher Don Stanhouse that triggered Milwaukee's five-run seventh inning, blew open a close game and helped the Brewers beat the Orioles 9-3.

In Friday night's other American League games, California ripped Oakland 10-1.

Minnesota clipped Seattle 8-2, Texas nipped Detroit 5-4, Chicago whipped New York 12-2 and Toronto turned back Kansas City 4-1 in a rain-shortened 5½-inning game.

When Weaver pulled Dempsey out of the game in the fifth inning, the two went nose to nose in the Baltimore dugout. "He slammed a helmet down, so I slammed a helmet down," Weaver said.

"He picked up a mask and threw it, so I picked up a mask and threw it. If he would have gotten too close, he would have been in trouble."

Dempsey said he was upset at being pulled from the game, but that he had cooled down. "There was no fight or anything. He explained his side and I explained mine. I was wrong."

Angels 10, A's 1
Don Aase scattered six hits while California had six extra-base hits, including Joe Rudi's home run and double, to batter Oakland.

In the second inning, Don

Twins 8, Mariners 2
Roy Smalley and Ken Landreaux hit two-run homers and John Castino had a two-run single to pace Minnesota's romp over Seattle.

Reds 4, Padres 2
Dan Driessen's two-run double keyed a three-run first inning and Dave Concepcion drilled four hits as Cincinnati beat San Diego.

Bill Bonham, with six strong innings, recorded his first victory since undergoing surgery last September for bone chips in his right elbow. He scattered seven hits.

Braves 2, Dodgers 1
Gary Matthews' sacrifice fly provided the decisive run in the fifth, and reliever Gene

Giants 8, Astros 7
Jack Clark hit a three-run homer and Bill Madlock also knocked in three runs, powering San Francisco over Houston. Houston allowed only six earned runs in their first six games, but San Francisco jumped to an 8-1 lead after four innings with Clark delivering his big blow in a four-run fourth.

Rose Suit Dropped
CINCINNATI (AP) — A Hamilton County Juvenile Court judge has dismissed a paternity claim against baseball star Pete Rose, but the case will be pursued in Florida, attorneys say.

Judge David E. Grossmann dismissed the suit in Cincinnati Friday at the request of Cincinnati attorney Ed Benson, who represented Terry Rubio of Tampa, Fla.

Rubio, 25, alleged in lawsuits filed in Ohio and Florida that Rose is the father of her 1-year-old daughter, Morgan.

Minor League Return Possible

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The state Commerce Department is exploring the possibility of returning minor league baseball to Western Kentucky.

Commerce Commissioner Carroll Knicey said establishment of a league could have a positive influence on economic development in the area. He said several Western Kentucky residents have inquired about the feasibility of re-establishing the old Kitty League.

Knicey said Hillman Lyons of Murray, the department's recreational development representative, will work with local officials interested in seeing their communities become home for a minor league team, to establish facilities that meet league requirements.

KENTUCKY BUSINESS SCENE

Personal Kentucky Income Up 14% In 1978

Two years ago, eight Kentuckians who reported yearly incomes of more than $200,000 paid no state income tax. Thirty-four others who reported incomes of between $100,000 and $200,000 also paid no tax.

That's not a large number of people considering the fact that 1,412,043 tax returns were filed in Kentucky that year. And there are perfectly legal reasons — like various types of tax write-offs and loopholes or tax-free investments — for high-income Kentuckians to owe no tax.

Just as interesting for trivia buffs is the fact that there are three Kentuckians in tiny Bell County of southeastern Kentucky who have each paid in excess of $100,000 in yearly state income tax.

That may make the average

Kentuckian feel just a bit better in the aftermath of the 1979 income tax filing deadline. That same Kentuckian, though, may have discovered something this year while filing a return: that his or her personal income in 1978 was up substantially.

According to figures compiled by Business Week magazine, total personal income increased 14 percent in 1978. Kentuckians' gains in personal income were tenth highest of all 50 states and were the highest of all states east of the Mississippi River.

According to William L. Short, secretary of the state's Development Cabinet, the growth rates in Kentucky are attributable to income booms in construction, manufacturing and farming. And he predicted that Kentucky will continue to outstrip most of the rest of the country in personal income gains because of various economic development programs underway.

That doesn't mean, of course, that everyone's income is up in Kentucky; it's the average personal income that has made new records. Kentucky continues to have both poor people and millionaires, as well as the majority of taxpayers who fall somewhere in between.

And Kentucky has its share of millionaires, mostly located in the coal counties, the urban areas and the bluegrass horse farm regions. At the top of the list, according to Fortune magazine, is coal executive Claude Canada of Pikeville. In an article titled "Who's Who of the Private Rich" he was reported to be worth between $75 million and $100 million.

A special study conducted by the Kentucky Department of Revenue in 1975 confirmed assumptions about the location of the state's wealthiest people. There were only about 9,000 tax returns filed in coal-rich Bell County that year, for instance, but 26 of them reported more than $100,000 income. In Jefferson County, containing the state's most urban population and where more than 316,000 returns were filed in 1975, three taxpayers reported incomes of more than $1 million each and 645 others earned in excess of $100,000. Fayette County, home of the lush horse farms, had four residents reporting incomes of more than $500,000 and an additional 183 with yearly incomes that exceeded $100,000.

By way of comparison, a 1978 report of the state Department of Commerce states that median family income in Kentucky for a family of between three and four persons was $11,200.

Owen's Food Market Remodels

The past several weeks there have been consistent changes in the inside appearance of Owen's Food Market. "We have now completed all of our remodeling," stated Kenny Owen, owner of Owen's Food Market.

The most prominent of the changes is the addition of a hot deli as well as a 32 foot 4 deck meat display case.

"The hot deli features fried chicken, barbecued ribs and chicken and chicken and dumplings.

"We also have an assorted variety of vegetables to round out a hot meal," Owen added.

The new meat case allows the local market to display a wider variety of meats to their already large selection.

According to Owen there would still be fresh barbecue and barbecued ham cooked fresh daily as always and all the salads and side orders that go with them.

Catering service is also available for any size group with at least 3 days advance notice. Mr. Owen can be contacted at 753-4682 or at the store located at 1407 Main.

Hughes Completes Course Retains Membership In AAFD

KANSAS CITY, MO — Dr. Donald G. Hughes has completed continuing education requirements to retain active membership in the American Academy of Family Physicians, the national association of family doctors. The Academy formerly was called the American Academy of General Practice.

The requirements call for members to complete a minimum of 150 hours of accredited continuing medical study every three years. Members become eligible for re-election at the end of the third year following their election to membership. The Academy, the country's second largest national medical association, was the first national medical group to require members to keep up with medical progress through continuing education. The Academy, founded in 1947 and headquartered in Kansas City, Mo., was instrumental in the establishment of a new primary specialty in family practice in 1969. The new specialty is expected to increase the numbers of family physicians available to serve the public in the future. The Academy's continuing education program is the foundation of eligibility for family doctors now in practice who apply for certification in the new specialty.

Billion Dollar Mark Passed By Kentucky Savings And Loan Asso.

Mortgage lending activity by Kentucky's savings and loan associations passed the billion-dollar mark in 1978 for the first time in history.

"The activity of our 100 members in 1978 demonstrated again the importance of savings and loan institutions in Kentuckians' home-building and home-buying plans," Kentucky Savings and Loan League President Charles W. Murphey said.

He noted that at the end of 1978, savings and loans in Kentucky held about 61 percent of all outstanding mortgage loans, and served as depositories for about half of Kentucky's savings deposits.

The figures were based on a Kentucky Savings and Loan League survey which produced responses from 88 institutions representing 91 percent of the state's total savings and loan assets. Figures were adjusted proportionately to 100 percent of assets for a more accurate reflection of the role of savings and loan associations in Kentucky's economy.

The survey disclosed that 1978 mortgages granted by savings and loan institutions totaled $1,096,124,000, bringing to more than $4.5 billion the total amount of mortgages outstanding within Kentucky's savings and loan industry. A total of 202,508 mortgage loans were on the books of Kentucky associations, including 38,419 granted in 1978.

About 15 percent of the 1978 mortgage loans — 5,468 — were for newly-constructed homes. The remainder financed existing housing units.

Kentuckians added about $65.5 million to their savings in savings and loan accounts in 1978, Murphey said. Their deposits totaled about $1,683,000,000, while withdrawals totaled approximately $1,617,000,000. Savings accounts on deposit in Kentucky savings and loan institutions totaled about $4.3 billion at the close of 1978, Murphey said. The institutions paid $48,392 Kentucky savers interest totaling nearly $277 million on those deposits, he added.

"The decade of the '70s has been one of tremendous growth in both lending and savings activity in our industry," Murphey said. "Both mortgage loans outstanding and total savings have nearly tripled since 1970," he said.

But he noted that Kentucky's growth in mortgages and savings has not quite matched national averages. According to Federal Home Loan Bank and U.S. League of Savings Associations statistics, Kentucky accounted for 1.06 percent of the nation's outstanding mortgages and 1.09 percent of savings in 1979, but only 1.04 percent of mortgages and 1.07 percent of savings in 1978.

"Our survey has shown that the greatest amount of savings growth during 1978 came in the Lexington area, with about $5 being deposited for every $4 withdrawn," Murphey said. "The metropolitan area of Northern Kentucky came very close to matching that growth rate, while Louisville savers were withdrawing about $9 for every $10 deposited."

Low blood pressure

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is it normal for an entire family to have very low blood pressure? Mine has always been low. I have no health problems and I have lots of energy. I was very surprised to learn that my 17 year old and 19 year old both have low blood pressure.

DEAR READER — One of the statements of an early professor has always stuck with me. It was his advice about what to do when you see a patient who has low blood pressure. He said, "Tell your patient to go home, get down on his knees and thank God he's got it." What he meant was that healthy people with low blood pressure tend to live lots longer and continue to be healthier than individuals who have higher blood pressure.

We've seen this in a variety of population studies. The Navajo Indians are less likely to have fatty-cholesterol deposits in their arteries even when they eat high-fat diets because they have an inherited characteristic of low blood pressure. In general, if you're healthy and feel good and are without health problems, the lower your blood pressure is, the better your health will continue to be.

Let me give you a little illustration that happens in your own body. We hear about heart attacks and strokes and similar problems of the circulation all the time. These are caused by fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries. That part of the arterial system in your body is the high pressure circulation. Commonly the pressure is around 120 over 75. That's perfectly normal. Of course, it can be higher. This entire arterial system is susceptible to fatty-cholesterol deposits and that's what causes all the problems.

In the same person you will find little, if any, fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries that go from the heart to the lungs. Now keep in mind that since both artery systems are in the same body, they both are subjected to the same inherited characteristics, dietary habits, living patterns and whatever.

The chief difference between these two major artery systems in the body is that the arteries to the lungs are under very low pressure. The arteries to the lungs normally have a pressure considerably less than 40. It's that low pressure that protects the arteries to the lungs. That's an object lesson about the importance of low pressure in preventing circulatory problems.

To give you a better idea on the factors that control blood pressure, I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-8, Blood Pressure.

Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

It also means that it's important that all of us maintain a normal or low normal blood pressure. You can achieve that by preventing obesity, maintaining physical activity and avoiding an excess use of salt in your diet. Even with these measures, there will still be people who have pressure that's relatively high. In these instances where the pressure is persistently elevated to an abnormal level, medicines can be used to lower the pressure.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department forecasts the average retail price of hamburger could rise to $1.60 a pound this summer, a 38 percent jump from the average price of $1.16 in the July-September period of last year.

The forecast, based on recent price trends, was included Thursday in a new "livestock and meat situation" report issued by the department.

Donald B. Agnew, who wrote the report, said his "guesstimate" of hamburger prices in March was that they averaged around $1.53 to $1.55 a pound nationally. The exact March figures will be available later this month.

The report said the continuing rise in hamburger prices will lead to more use of "extenders" made from soybeans and other vegetable products in special kinds of hamburger.

Agnew also said he could not yet predict what hamburger prices may average over all of 1979. The average price was about $1.11 a pound last year, a rise of 37 percent from 80.9 cents a pound in 1977.

But if present upward trends continue, retail hamburger prices could average around $1.50 a pound over the entire year, a gain almost as great as 1978's increase.

Agnew's report also said fastfood restaurants may adjust to reduced hamburger supplies and higher prices by increasing their menu offerings of poultry, pork and seafood items.

In the 16th century, Afraio Albanesi of Pavia developed a reed instrument from an ancient Serbian bagpipe which was shaped like the letter H.

Elections Held; Bushart Is President

Mack Bushart of Gilbertsville was elected president of the Student Government Association (SGA) at Murray State University for 1979-80 in balloting among students on the campus Wednesday, April 11.

He defeated three other candidates — Barry Bryant, East Point, Ga.; Ted Hayden, South Fulton, Tenn.; and Ronnie Workman, Crutcheville — for the one-year term to begin April 30.

His election means that he will also serve on the university board of regents as the student representative. Bushart will meet with the board on April 28 and will be sworn in as a member at the following meeting.

The 21-year-old Bushart, a physics major, polled 367 votes to lead the field of four candidates for the presidency. The other candidates and the number of votes cast for each of them are: Hayden, 299; Bryant, 235; and Workman, 231.

Bushart has served as executive assistant to the SGA president, as a member of the SGA Executive Council, four years on the Student Senate, including one as parliamentarian, and on several campus and SGA committees.

He will succeed Martha Boles of Madisonville, the outgoing SGA president and retiring student representative to the board of regents.

In other elections for the SGA executive council, Tab Brockman of Louisville was elected vice-president, Debbie Wyatt of Mayfield secretary, and Terry Clark of Murray ran unopposed for the office of treasurer.

Brockman defeated Chris Clifton of Detroit, and Miss Wyatt outpolled David Black of Hickman and Carol Pickersgill of Olmsted Falls, Ohio.

Twenty-nine of the 53 positions to be filled were contested during the election. All but one of the 27 seats on the Student Senate were decided, and all but one of the 22 positions on the Student Activities Board were filled.

Members of the Student Senate are elected by colleges, with representation in proportion to the enrollment of each college. Colleges, their numbers of senators, and those elected in the campus balloting are:

Creative Expression (3) — Patty Jackson, Clinton; Johnny Carruthers, Murray; and Gordon Beck, Louisville.

Humanistic Studies (3) — John Rhodes, Owensboro; Mike Fair and Stuart Bivin, both of Utica.

Industry and Technology (3) — Keith Hayden, Fancy Farm; and Jerry Galvin, Hopkinsville.

Business and Public Affairs (5) — Lisa Fleming, Slaughter; Greg Clark, Owensboro; Richard Fowler, Louisville; and Steve Hancock and Delores Honchul, both of Murray.

Human Development and Learning (9) — Jean Shade, Henderson; Karen Pinson, Alexandria, Va.; Kim Fox, Madisonville; Shane Bowling, Cartersville, Ohio; Susan Durham, Mt. Vernon, Ind.; Gretchen Skarka, Westtown, N. Y.; Sherri McDaniel, Benton; Susan Barklage, Cape Girardeau, Mo.; and Leesa Mason, Bardwell.

Environmental Sciences (4) — Jeff Braaten, Radcliff; Lisa Abell, Gilbertsville; Karen Burman, Louisville; and John Brinkley, Hazel.

The vacancy in the Student Senate from the College of Industry and Technology will be filled through a procedure of applications and interviews.

Board will be made up of eight on-campus representatives and 14 off-campus representatives. One off-campus representative is yet to be selected.

On-campus representatives elected are: Mark Lamb, Metropolis, Ill.; Pam Graham, Belleville, Ill.; Toni Thompson, Henderson; Steve Simmons and Mike Fraser, both of Hopkinsville; Tammy Girten, Morganfield; Cindy Meyer, Farmington, Mo.; and Roxi Witt, Owensboro.

Off-campus representatives who won election without opposition are: Bret Cude, Hickory; Mark Covitts, Lewisport; Sarah Ross, Ken Brandon, and Mark Vinson, all of Murray; David Elliott, Mayfield; Marilu Johnson, Pocatello, Idaho; Jim Carter, Whitesville; Kent Hayden, Fancy Farm; Greg Ford, Evansville, Ind.; Rex Meyr, Chaffee, Mo.; Tom Vines, Desloge, Mo.; and Scott Pendleton, Hopkinsville.

Sloane Pushing Platform

By CHARLES WOLFE
Associated Press Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Harvey Sloane has put forth an education platform that would cost $50 million more than what already is committed to education.

Sloane says that is the only major spending increase he will propose in the campaign, adding that the program is needed if Kentucky is to attain the educational quality of its seven neighboring states.

Education was the No. 1 concern voiced by those he met during his campaign walk across the state, Sloane said.

In a press conference here Friday, the former Louisville mayor unveiled an education platform which touched three major areas: school funding, financial accountability and teachers' salaries.

Kentucky is 38th nationally in per pupil expenditures, Sloane said, but second only to Hawaii in the amount spent by the state.

Local districts must spend more on education, although several school bond issues have been defeated in the last year, he said.

The state has about reached its limit. If local districts don't want to do their share, I don't think the state should bail them out," he said, adding $350 million is needed for school construction.

The state should abandon its classroom unit method of funding in favor of the weighted pupil formula, which focuses more on pupil needs, Sloane said.

Districts also should be funded on the basis of average daily attendance minus the two months with lowest attendance, he said. Funds now are distributed on the basis of total average attendance.

Sloane said the 50-to-1 kindergarten pupil-teacher ratio should be cut to 40-to-1 and the School Building Authority should be used to aid poorer school districts with crucial building needs.

Property taxes, the primary source of education funds, have themselves become a political issue, but Sloane said there was no immediate funding alternative.

"I don't see, realistically, how the property tax is going to be eliminated," Sloane said. "The property tax in Kentucky is not a great tax, proportionate to other states."

On accountability, Sloane said he would "streamline" the Department of Education, remove it from the Cabinet of Education and Arts and make the superintendent of education a cabinet official.

"The superintendent of education, who is an elected official, should not have to report to an appointee of the governor," he said.

Local school boards should be given greater autonomy, with the state setting only minimum standards and not dictating curricula, he said.

Sloane added he would veto any legislation that would mandate programs, but provide no additional funding for local districts. That included competency testing, he said, and the state should provide remedial assistance to pupils shown by the tests to need help.

Sloane praised Gov. Julian Carroll for improving teacher salaries to a No. 30 national ranking and helping retain qualified teachers.

He said he also would work to continue reducing the unfunded liability in the Teachers' Retirement Fund.

Statewide Group Endorses McBrayer

By SY RAMSEY
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A statewide committee claiming to represent 100 local unions has announced it is endorsing Terry McBrayer as a Democratic candidate for governor.

The move was an attempt to carve out a chunk of the labor support that has been going — at least in public commitments — largely to Lt. Gov. Thelma Stovall, a McBrayer rival.

At a news conference Friday, McBrayer said he has done more for labor during his five terms as a legislator than merely "saying you can hang your hat in my office" — an obvious reference to Mrs. Stovall's long tenure in secondary state posts.

In a blunt comment, he said the real question is, whether labor "wants to live with Louie Nunn another four years."

"Hell, no," one of the 100 persons in the crowd shouted.

Nunn, a former Republican governor, is running again this year.

McBrayer said he is aware Mrs. Stovall is gathering labor endorsements. He added: "She's the finest lady in Democratic politics, but she cannot win this fall, and I can."

In the past few days, McBrayer allies such as former Gov. Bert Combs and Gov. Julian Carroll have been sounding the same theme, that the lieutenant governor would be defeated by Nunn because she is not perceived by voters as competent for the job.

"I have a good labor record," McBrayer said to vigorous applause. His supporters passed out a leaflet indicating he had helped unions on dozens of bills when he was a House member.

Mrs. Stovall's main achievement has been the endorsement of the state AFL-CIO, and to a lesser extent the United Automobile Workers.

But McBrayer told a newsman that both endorsements were much less than they seemed.

He said the state AFL-CIO "wouldn't even let my name be put on the floor," while only 47 members of the UAW took that crucial vote, and that many merely were members, not delegates.

The "Labor for McBrayer" organization has filed with the Kentucky Registry of Election Finance.

Larry Clark, business manager of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, said the committee represents more than 60,000 wage earners.

Carter Finding Rest, Solitude

SAPELO ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — President Carter is finding near-perfect solitude in a wildlife refuge here where his closest neighbors include snakes and alligators.

Carter had no announced schedule today, and his Thursday activities were hardly arduous.

The White House press office, headquartered more than 30 miles away on Jekyll Island, said only that the president had a lunch of sandwiches and soup after arriving from Washington, and then walked on the beach with wife Rosalynn and daughter Amy.

"They have been in the house the rest of the afternoon, reading and resting," the sparse announcement concluded. "They have no special plans for this evening."

The Carters are staying in a well-preserved 19th-century plantation manor house where President Calvin Coolidge once sojourned. The spacious residence, which looks something like the White House plopped in the center of a coastal forest, is owned by the University of Georgia Marine Institute.

The press office said the Carters are renting the place, but has been unable to provide a dollar figure. Deputy press secretary Rex Granum said simply that the Carters were paying "the going rate."

The president came here principally to fish with his wife and two old friends, Brunswick, Ga., optometrist Carlton Hicks and attorney James Bishop.

Commission Issues First Order

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky's new Energy Regulatory Commission has issued its first order, cutting Union Light Heat and Power Co.'s request for a 14 per cent return on equity to 12 percent.

The order reduces the utility's additional revenue requirements from $7.8 million to $5.3 million.

The commission said Friday that in reducing the 12.8 percent return granted the company by the old Public Service Commission in 1976, it was making a distinction between Union and other utilities which generate electricity or develop gas reserves.

The three-member commission said Union is a subsidiary of Cincinnati Gas and Electric Co., with the parent company owning more than 99 percent of Union's stock.

That situation causes the company to assume relatively little risk in comparison with generating companies, the commission said.

Recent orders in rate cases involving investor-owned electric and gas utilities have allowed a 13 percent return on equity. Monthly electric and gas rates reflect the return allowed a utility.

The Attorney General's consumer protection division, in testimony before the PSC, had proposed a return to the company in the neighborhood of 12 to 13 percent.

The increase granted by the ERC will add about $1.35 to average residential electric bills in homes using 750 kilowatt hours per month.

The rate hike will mean an additional $2.16 a month to residential gas customers using an average of 12,000 cubic feet.

Union Light Heat and Power Co.'s rate hearing was the first to be held by the old PSC outside Frankfort. The two-stage hearing was held Jan. 17-18 on the Northern Kentucky University campus and March 2 in the Covington-Kenton County municipal building.

A native of Allentown, Pa., Strohecker earned his Ph.D. at the University of Michigan. He is the immediate past president of the Kentucky Library Association, chairman of the Intellectual Freedom Committee of the Southeastern Library Association and a member of the Governor's Advisory Council on Libraries as well as the Governor's Pre-White House Steering Committee.

Grace Baptists To Hear Rev. Burpoe

The chairmen are presently working on plans and ticket sales for a reception and breakfast for Lewis that will be held April 28 at the Colonial House Smorgasbord.

The chairmen are actively involved in various community organizations. Walston, president and general manager of PSR, is an active Rotarian and on the
